

Abstract:

A cavity enclosed stacked patch antenna is investigated with a view to examine its resonance characteristics and the effect of the cavity on it. The design employs inverted microstrip circular patch in stacked configuration. As such, the structure becomes easily integratable with active device. The effect of the cavity dimension is critically examined and the possibility of obtaining dual resonances with 7% and 6% individual bandwidth is revealed.