The method of lines is applied to nonlinear waveguides. The power-dependent mode properties obtained are contrasted with those obtained by different routes.